Network Server
(A50)

Quick Start Guide

The Network Server comes complete with a detailed User Guide which is not printed, but stored on the CD enclosed. Please refer to this as required.

It also comes with a printed Quick Installation Guide which provides initial instructions to start using the server.

Please follow the instructions in the Quick Installation Guide to check the contents of the package, to connect the cameras etc and server to the network, and to load and commence using the server. To assist, you may find the diagram opposite helpful in locating the appropriate sockets etc on the server.

When using the server, we recommend that you use the program “IP Edit”, which has facilities for live viewing of up to 4 cameras. To take a photo or commence video recording or time lapse photography, right click on the live image, and follow the instructions on the screen.

Please note the following:

The server is equipped to accept up to 4 video inputs, and only one audio input. It is not equipped with video output—the output is fed into your network, and can be viewed by PCs and other devices via the network.

The software package “Enjoy Birds More by PC” is not designed to accept video input from this server. If it is installed on any of the PCs on the network, it will operate properly, but will require camera input via a video card or Video to USB Converter, and not this server.

Once operating, the functions of “IP Edit” will be available from browsers on any of the PCs or devices on the network or Internet, although some may require additional add-ons (or equivalent) to be installed. You may need to install the add-on “IP Video 9100A” to Microsoft Internet Explorer. This add on should be installed automatically by Windows, and is available across the Internet or on the CD supplied with the Network Server.

This Guide is printed on recycled paper.
